

2014

GUIDEPOST

Cabernet Sauvignon
RAPEL VALLEY
CHILE

Vintage: 2014
Region: Central Valley
Sub-Region: Rapel Valley
(Cachapoal & Colchagua)

Aging: 6 months
Barrels: French Oak, 4 years old
Alcohol: 13.5%
Production: 1250 cases

CACHAPOAL

Climate: Mediterranean (Warmer)
14 inches rain per yr

Soils: Gravel and sandy soils to the east. Clay to the west.

Varietals: 20% Cabernet Sauvignon
10% Malbec
5% Petit Verdot
~
Provide elegance

COLCHAGUA

Climate: Mediterranean (Cooler)
23 inches rain per yr

Soils: Clay, sand, with decomposed granite.

Varietals: 65% Cabernet Sauvignon
~
Provides structure & depth

Technical Notes

The Rapel Valley is one of Chile's best known wine regions and has earned much applause for its Cabernet. The country's most innovative and pioneering winemakers have identified this area as a premium source for robust, full-bodied, elegant, and balanced red varietal wines. Located about 85 miles south of Santiago, the Rapel Valley contains two sub-regions, the Cachapoal Valley to the north and the Colchagua Valley to the south. The Rapel River divides these sections, coursing through the region carrying Andes mountain runoff from the east to the Pacific in the west. The higher reaches of the Cachapoal Valley are very well-suited for red varietals and stretch eastward into the Andean foothills producing elegant Cabernets with lush fruit and subtlety. Cachapoal provides the soft elegance to this bottling.

Farther south lies Colchagua, and with all its terroir richness, paired with a population that has for generations worked in agriculture, means that it has both the land and the know-how for world-class winemaking. It's also home to the huaso (Chilean cowboys). The grapes from Colchagua provide structure and depth. When blended together the two regions complement one another for a well-integrated, nicely balanced wine.

Tasting Notes

This wine shows deep ruby red color. Aromas of cherry and raspberry accompanied with hints of chocolate and almond. Fruit-forward in style and easy to drink, it is juicy, with black cherry and blackberry flavors and soft, round tannins.

